Supermarket

The manager of our local supermarket tells this story. It happened in his store. A woman tried to enter with a dog on a leash. He pointed to the sign which read: "No animals permitted in this store. By order of the Board of Health."

"That sign doesn't apply to my dog," she insisted. "So we are going over to the meat counter."

"Why not leave the dog with me," suggested the manager. "Then make your choice of the meat you want."

"But it is Fiffi who has to make the choice of the meat she wants," smiled the woman.

The Perfect Marriage

The Marshall Art Gallery recently sold the picture, "The Perfect Marriage" by Marcel Devoin for $150,000. As you may know, this painting depicts a marriage in Flanders in the 1500's. Marcel Devoin is a very witty man as well as being one of the finest painters in the world. When he had finished this particular picture, it was hung in exhibit in his native town. Jean Bucharge, the art critic, looked at it with not favorable eyes.

"I can show you at least five errors in this picture that not even an amateur would have made," he said. "Not a perfect painting."

"How could I do a perfect painting of a marriage," snapped back the artist, "when I haven't been able to find the perfect marriage."

To Bathe or Not to Bathe?

Sid Murry, the sports promoter, tells this particular story: "For three years, I managed a fellow by the name of Jee Garganta. He weighed almost 700 pounds. He was billed as the "Strongest Man in the World." We would travel from town to town and appear at carnivals and other special celebrations. He could rip a fat telephone book in half; bend an iron horseshoe; or hold up ten men on a board. Of course, he would perspire a lot; and when it dried on him, there was a peculiar body odor. How to tell him to take a shower or bath without offending him? So I came right to the point one evening.

"No use trying to tell me to take a bath," he said. "Out of the question."

"Why?" I persisted. "Just give me one good reason why?"

"Look at me," he grinned. "And see how much of me I would have to dry. By the time I would get finished covering all that area of skin, I would be

The Perfect Answer

Recently I attended a social affair. There were stars of the screen, T.V., and the stage there also several reporters. This particular one was young. He was going to learn the hard way when and when not to ask certain questions.

Mrs. X was there. When young, she had been a beautiful gem on the screen. Now she was still successful and doing the grandma part in a successful T.V. series. Somebody told this young reporter something in his ear. He rushed over to Mrs. X, and in a voice that could be heard by everyone of us asked:

"I understand you have been married and divorced six times. Could you tell me why?"

There was the kind of a silence when you can hear a pin drop. But Mrs. X was up to the situation. She handed him this crusher:

"Very simple, my dear, young, handsome man. I happened to enjoy eating the wedding cake? Want to be my seventh?"

The Golfer

I have seen handicapped people determined to engage in sports. This was most remarkable. A blind golfer on the driving range. His caddy was with him and telling him in what direction to hit the ball. We were all amazed.

"Ever play for money?" asked Mike Winslow, the famous professional.

"I will play you for $1,000 a hole," was the unexpected reply.

"You got a deal," laughed Winslow. "Tell me when you are ready to play."

"First night without any stars, no moon, and lots of clouds," was the laughing reply.
